

XM radio is providing a service that I pay for that is very similar to Dish Network and DirectTV. Local TV stations have already found that they cannot stop Dish & Direct from carrying identical programming, the legal precedence has already been set. Dish, Direct & XM have the right to under the law to provide me with services that I want and pay for. NAB has no authority to regulate this and the FCC has no business even hearing NAB's arguments as this has been settled before. Local stations both TV and radio do not and cannot have a monopoly on what I wish to hear.

XM is not re-broadcasting the local stations as Dish & Direct do. XM provides their own coverage.

Leave this alone and let normal business competition decide who does what.
